Kidnaping Plot to Take Quintuplets to U.S. Discovered

Canada, Aroused by Threat, Throws Police Guard Around Babies

BABIES DOING FINE

World-Famous Infants Are Now 9 Months and 25 Days Old

TORONTO, Canada.—(AP)—An alleged plot to kidnap the famous Dionne quintuplets and take them to the United States in an airplane caused the Ontario provincial government Monday to order a police guard for the five babies.

Rumors said the kidnap plans called for a 150-mile automobile trip to Sault Ste. Marie, on the Michigan-Ontario border, where the airplane was to have been waiting for a night dash to an undisclosed place across the line.

Minister of Public Welfare David Croll said the police guard was being placed at the Dufour hospital, near Cheltenham, day and night "for the babies' protection." He would add nothing to the statement.

The babies are "special wards of his majesty the king" by virtue of a law passed by the Ontario legislature and due to be finally approved by the lieutenant governor of the province. The law would have no effect if the babies were removed from the hospital.

The babies are nine months and 25 days old, and are in perfect health. They have progressed steadily since being moved from the Dionne farm home to the hospital built for them across the road.

Protection for the infants was not lacking, but previously there had been no special precautions taken against kidnapers. Until the coming of winter the babies' grandfather, Oliver Dionne, stood guard at the gate of the hospital every day to keep out the curious.

Other relatives of the family have been within call if guards were needed, while a provincial constable could be summoned by telephone from North Bay, 12 miles distant.

Experiment Farm Also Reports on Varieties of Truck and Fruit

The annual spring visiting day last Friday at the Branch Fruit and Truck Experiment Station of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture was attended by approximately 800 farmers and farm women.

G. W. Ware, assistant director, in charge of the station, explained to the visitors results obtained at the station with different varieties of fruit and truck crops. The farmers inspected the farm and heard discussions on the 1935 cotton program, rural beautification, planting home grounds and soybeans during the day.

The visiting farmers learned that the station is recommending 5-10-5 fertilizer for practically all vegetable crops, but in different amounts for various crops. Of all the varieties of

Well-and-First Day in the Liquor Business Is Okeh

2,000 Visit Porterfield Emporium—Many Innocent Bystanders

LICENSES PENDING

Second Reported Granted—But Star Is Unable to Learn Dealer's Name

Well—and—the first day's liquor business in Hope was no rush—but moved moderately on the terms of strictly cash—and—Well—a little profit.

That was the answer J. C. Porterfield, the first licensed liquor dealer in Hope for nearly 30 years, made to an inquiry by The Star Tuesday.

Well—and—so—tell the people that we appreciate their trade—and for them to come and see us, Mr. Porterfield continued with his famous stutter.

The interview

Q. What about the rumor that six other retail dealers are going into the liquor business here?

A. Well—and—we won't make house rent! Too many will ruin the business.

Q. How many persons have visited your place?

A. Well—and—I would say over 2,000. Monday they were so thick in here you couldn't stir them with a stick.

Q. Are many buying liquor?

A. Well—I would say no. Many are curious spectators. Others call to get prices—and then some return and make purchases.

Q. What about the prices?

A. The highest is $3 a pint. The cheapest is 85 cents.

Q. What's the difference between blended and bonded liquor?

A. Well—and—bonded liquor is from the government warehouses. It's the aged stuff. Blended liquor is the mixture of various liquors.

Yes, Sir

Q. How many brands do you carry for sale?

A. Well—it's all for sale—we have about 20 brands on hand—but will have more soon.

Q. Do you sell to anybody?

A. Well—and—Some negro boys came in this morning. They ask about liquor—and I ask about their age. One negro said: "I'm 18. Well—and—I told them they would have to get out—and that they were too young."

Q. Have there been any church organizations or women's group to see you?

A. Well, no. But tell them they are invited. And that they are welcome to inspect our store any time they choose. It is our desire to live up to the letter—and the spirit—of the law.

State Revenue Commissioner Earl Wiseman told The Star from Little Rock Tuesday afternoon that a second license had been issued to a Hope retailer dealer, but he was unable to furnish the name without checking back through his files.

At the city hall, Mayor R. A. Buyett said that he had received no applications from anyone; that only one permit had been granted, and that was issued to J. C. Porterfield.

$25,000 Revenue

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Tax revenue from the Thorn liquor control act Tuesday aggregated more than $25,000 from licenses alone, state revenue officials announced. Figures were unavailable on income from the sale of tax stamps, at the rate of 40 cents per gallon on liquor.

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—It seems evident that the federal-state relief system has been used widely for political purposes.

But it isn't going to be used to build up anti-administration state machines—except if Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins can help it.

That's a considerable part of the great moral lesson to be drawn from the onslaught against Governor Martin L. Davey of Ohio, who faces charges of "political corruption" and "shakedown" in the relief administration of his state.

The Roosevelt administration is shooting at the political leadership of Davey and the Ohio Democratic state committee as well as at the alleged corruption.

At the same time Hopkins is given

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Senator Cutting, New Mexico Republican, Tuesday asked the senate elections committee to disburse the contest suit against his election by former Representative Demetris Chavez on the ground that the allegations in Chavez' petition "are so misleading, erroneous, and false as to fall to state grounds for the contest on which the senate can proceed."

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Futrell Tuesday vetoed the Rowell bill seeking to bar the claim of dower by foreclosure as "an attempt to usurp judicial powers."

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Officials of the United Confederate Veterans decided Tuesday to accept an invitation to hold their annual reunion in Amarillo, Texas.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Former President Hoover was reported Tuesday to have told a friend here that he has "no aspirations to be the Republican presidential candidate in 1936."

Hope Furniture company announced Tuesday that Rufus Herndon, Jr., had joined the firm following his graduation last week from Cincinnati College of Embalming, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Young Herndon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Herndon, attended commencement exercises held Friday morning. He was one of 38 to receive a diploma.

His connection with Hope Furniture company will give the firm two licensed embalmers.

While at Cincinnati, the elder Mr. Herndon purchased a new Henney ambulance. A patient can be loaded in it from either side or from the rear. The present ambulance is being retained by the company, giving the establishment two machines.

Hot Springs Bars Closed by Raiders

Arkansas Package Sale Law to Be Strictly Enforced at Spa

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Striking immediately after they had heard Judge Earl Witt charge the new grand jury, county officers Monday began a series of raids on Hot Springs bars, confiscated liquor and closed two places. Headed by Chief Deputy Sheriff Roy E. Erney, Deputy Will Lowe and Constable John Young, the officers inaugurated a series of raids on liquor establishments of the city.

In letters to Sheriff Jim Floyd, Chief of Police Joe Wakelin and Constable John Young, Judge Witt outlined the enforcement program which doomed the open bars that have been operating here.

In his charge to the grand jury, Judge Witt declared that Mayor Lee P. McLaughlin and Municipal Judge V. S. Ledgerwood had told him that they intended to assist him in every way in the enforcement of this law. Moody fines of $25 against all liquor dispensers of the city on charges of operating disorderly houses, the former method of taxation by the city, were discontinued and the dispensers warned by Judge Ledgerwood that they must comply with the state law.

Indictments were returned against Arthur Webster, negro, charged with grand larceny; Robert Lee Black, negro, burglary; Clarence Sanders, grand larceny; and Harold J. Gray, embezzlement. All are in custody.

Long Henchman to Face Tax Inquiry

Abe Shushan's Trial for Income Tax Fraud Is Set May 6

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Abe L. Shushan, president of the Orleans Levee Board and closely affiliated with Senator Huey P. Long's political organization, suffered a double setback in federal court here Monday in his fight against prosecution on alleged attempts to evade income tax payments.

After overruling motions seeking nullification of the indictment and to force the government to furnish the defendant with a bill of particulars, Judge Wayne G. Borah fixed May 6 as the trial date.

NEW INFLATION TRY

House Silver Bloc Fights to Retain Senate Rider on Relief Bill

EN ROUTE TO FLORIDA With President Roosevelt.—(AP)—Visions of bouts with big game fish rose in President Roosevelt's mind Tuesday as he sped southward for a vacation off the Florida coast, leaving behind him in the capital a tentative seven-point legislative program.

Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, is accompanying the president, presumably to discuss the details of the government's huge work-relief program.

Inflationists Strike

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The house silver bloc—42 strong—determined Tuesday to attempt to send the public works relief bill to the White House without a conference with the senate on the administration-opposed amendments.

Meeting in the house caucus room at the call of Representative Martin, Colorado Democrat, the bloc heard Representative Rankin, Mississippi Democrat, explain the parliamentary situation; and a special resolution was decided upon by the Democratic leaders which would send the bill to conference without any consideration of the senate's amendments—including the silver inflation amendment.

F. D. Goes Fishing

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, turned southward Monday night for his annual fishing cruise, assured of an improvement in the serious illness of his secretary and friend, Louis M. Howe, and satisfied that his legislative program would be given attention.

In a late afternoon conference, several hours before boarding the train, the president and Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, discussed the legislative situation and agreed upon congressional consideration for seven main subjects.

Robinson, while emphasizing that no measure included in the program talked over with the president was "must," said it was agreed each was "entitled" to consideration by congress. The list included NRA extension, social security, including old age pensions and unemployment insurance; utility holding company legislation, increasing capitalization of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and banking measures. Mr. Roosevelt was said to believe also that transportation regulation and a revision of the pure food and drug act should be considered.

Curlew Flays NRA

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Sweeping general criticisms of NRA were supplanted Monday before senate investigators by a specific complaint that the code authority for the men's clothing industry was not "representative" and that one group dominated an "important minority."

The charges were made by Francis M. Curlew of St. Louis, representing the Industrial Recovery Association of Clothing Manufacturers. His assertions did not raise the issue of the effect of NRA on small business because the complaining minority included big as well as small units.

Curlew charged that his group, composed of 70 out of the several thousand units in the industry, was permitted representation on the code authority only through members chosen by the majority group, the Clothing Manufacturers Association of the United States of America.

The latter, he said, not only had 10 of its own representatives on the authority, but was permitted to select the five to represent the minority group. Curlew testified he and others in the group had been invited to serve on the code authority but had declined.

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—The Anglo-German conversations ended late Tuesday and it was officially announced that Hitler had not given a definite indication of how large a military force he intends to build.

Hitler, German officials said, parried the questions of Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and turned back the whole arms problem to the World War allied enemies of Germany.

Regarding the League of Nations, it was said that Hitler said all matters must be settled for Germany before he would consider re-entering the League.

BERLIN, Germany.—A nine-hour conference between Adolf Hitler, Sir John Simon and Anthony Eden broke up Monday night with everybody smiling cordially and with an agreement reached, the Associated Press was informed by an authoritative source, on three important points.

1. The British envoys promised Hitler that England no longer will insist upon the mutual assistance feature of the proposed Eastern security pact.

2. On Germany's part, Hitler gave assurance that his nation does not have the faintest intention of ever attacking Russia. He said this after insisting that Germany will stand pat on demands for a big army and navy in order to defend Europe from Russian Bolshevism.

3. Hitler further said that Germany is ready to enter a treaty of amity and friendship with Lithuania, provided that country lives up to terms of the Memei statute which guarantees certain rights to German minorities.

These were the concrete results of the first day of conversations which diplomats agree may mean peace or war to Europe.

League Question

Tuesday the discussions are to continue, focusing around the questions of Germany's re-entry into the League of Nations, German rearmament and the European air pact proposed in the Anglo-French agreement reached in London.

Both sides were obviously pleased with the results of the day's work. Hitler was in such good humor that he not only asked the British visitors to have luncheon in the chancellery but invited Lady Phipps, wife of the Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador to Berlin, to join them.

Six persons were present during the conversations. Besides Hitler and the two men from the English Foreign Office were Ambassador Phipps, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the German foreign minister, and General Joehim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special diplomatic expert.

Instead of going first into the broad general questions, both sides agreed to tackle first a problem in which Britain is least interested territorially—the proposed Eastern League pact. This is France's pet project.

It was understood Hitler expounded his views on this regional pact and expressed his aversion to anything that might engage Germany in a military way, even to the extent of involving her with powers that do not touch her borders.

Sir John obviously was pleased at Hitler's assurance of pacific intentions toward Russia. Earlier Hitler had cited Russia's big military plant and insisted, it was understood, on a big

Bonus 'Pressure' Is Urged by Veteran

Mrs. Caraway 'Friend,' Robinson 'Enemy,' of Patman Bill

LITTLE ROCK.—Immediate payment of the veterans' adjusted service compensation certificates is assured if the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion and other veterans organizations demand that congress override President Roosevelt's almost certain veto of the Patman bill.

The Patman bill was passed last Friday by the house, and veterans' officials are confident it will be passed in the senate. James E. Van Zandt, of Altoona, Pa., commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, declared Monday night in an address at the Elks Club, North Little Rock.

Mr. Van Zandt, a traffic department representative of the Pennsylvania railroad, who arrived in Little Rock on a two-day visit to Arkansas to stimulate sentiment in favor of passage and enactment of the Patman measure, said that 14 of 15 senators with whom he conferred Saturday in Washington expressed the opinion that the bill would successfully stand the senate test, but probably would be vetoed.

"Veterans number Senator Hattie W. Caraway among their friends in Washington because she has continuously fought for passage of the so-called bonus, but Senator Joe T. Robinson is the veterans' bitterest enemy as he has shown repeatedly," Mr. Van Zandt declared. "I do not think Senator Robinson will represent Arkansas as senator after 1936, but I advise you to remind him that the vote of Arkansas veterans will be a big help to him if he runs for the senate again."

He said that after the World War, congress authorized payment of adjusted salaries to 500,000 federal employees, adjusted profits to contractors who claimed they could not realize a fair profit after close of the war and adjusted profits to railroads taken over by the government during the war, but failed to adjust the lost pay of "the man who left his family to make the supreme sacrifice."

He listed five organizations working out of Washington, each of which he declared is backed by "big business" and which he said is opposed for selfish reasons to payment of the certificates.

He named the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Economy League, the American Liberty League, the National Manufacturers

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Two Kinds of Disease Harmful to Body

When your body fails to work satisfactorily, the disorder may be due to one of two types of disturbance, or in many instances to both.

Actual changes in the tissues are called structural diseases. For example, a broken bone, an inflamed liver, or an inefficiency of the body to digest and assimilate sugars properly might be called structural diseases. Sometimes, because of the ability of living tissues to repair this structural disease, you can go on to complete recovery. In other cases, the damage may be permanent.

Certain tissues of the body have specific duties to perform—for example, the cells of the lung, the heart, the liver, or the brain. If these cells are destroyed and are not replaced by the same type of cells that formerly existed there, the organ is damaged to a certain extent.

Your body contains considerable safety factors. Thus you have two lungs when one can do the work; two kidneys; a liver that is seven times as large as is necessary for carrying out its functions; and heart which very frequently carries on its work in a very badly damaged condition.

A considerable number of people get along with less brain capacity than do others.

If cells become inflamed, they may be replaced by cells of the same kind, or sometimes their place is taken by cells of fibrous or scar tissue. If you cut your hand, the scar which is formed is not of the same kind of tissue as the skin damaged by the cut.

If the cells of the pancreas, called the islets of Langerhans, are damaged, they are not repaired by tissue of the same kind, but instead by fibrous tissue.

These are the cells primarily responsible for development of the substance called insulin, which is necessary for use of sugar in the body. If enough damage is done to these special cells, diabetes follows.

There are, however, other kinds of disease in which no definite change is found in any cells of the body. This is particularly the case in conditions affecting the mind.

If a person becomes convinced in his own mind that he cannot talk, he will be unable to talk until he is unconvinced; if he becomes convinced that he cannot walk, he will not be able to walk until he is unconvinced.

Through failure to walk, he loses the power of motion in the muscles involved in walking. Through disuse they waste away. The joints, being continuously in one position, may become fixed. Then complete recovery is difficult even if the person is unconvinced later.

This is the sequence of events in conditions called hysteria. It is obvious that although these things begin as functional, they may develop into physical disturbances and interfere seriously with life.

Hauptmann Verdict Unjust? Read This—Rector's Book Shows State Case as Overwhelming

If you are host to an uneasy feeling that the authorities may have made an unfortunate mistake when they stuck Bruno Hauptmann in a death cell in New Jersey, you might profitably read Sidney B. Whipple's "The Lindbergh Crime."

In this book a talented reporter, familiar with the tragic case from the start, presents a complete resume of the affair from the commission of the crime to the return of the verdict at Flemington; and while he tells it impartially, he makes very clear the fact that the evidence against this man Hauptmann was nothing less than overwhelming.

His book is also a reminder that some exceedingly intelligent and thorough detective work was performed in this case. Before they ever saw Hauptmann, the detectives had received such complete descriptions of him that an artist could draw a re-

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Fidgetiness Mars Beauty.

Extremely nervous girls generally lose a great deal of their youthful beauty by the time they are thirty. I mean, of course, the fidgety kind of women who never can sit still a moment and who frown, twist their mouths and seldom relax.

Naturally, there are cases where self-control does no good. These are problems much too serious to come under the heading of "beauty" and should be taken up with physicians.

It is of girls who have developed nervous habits that can be corrected easily that I speak today.

First of all, learn how to relax completely, not only when you are lying in bed, but when you are reading, sewing or talking to someone. Don't fret over small things that no human can help. Try to adopt a calm, reasonable outlook on life.

Some may argue that calm people have no nerve, no enthusiasm. However, there's a great difference between vivacity and nervous energy that wears you out. And I see no reason why meaningless gestures and a state of excitement that makes everyone feel you need a good night's sleep should be confused with normal enthusiasm that is admirable. To be sure, every girl should be healthy enough to have a natural vigor that makes her interesting. But this doesn't mean she should flutter and fidget until she puts lines across her own brow and, in addition, makes everyone around her nervous.

Next: Exercises that relax your body.

Nightclub Slayer Is Arkansas Girl

"Marion King" Reveals She Is Bonnie Hill, of Johnson County

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—The veil of mystery that has surrounded the identity and past life of a 28-year-old girl accused of stabbing to death her drinking companion, John Irving Pierce, son of a leading Jackson (Miss.) family, in a French Quarter nightclub early Friday, was partially lifted Monday with her admission to Police Officer Harry Gregson that she was born Bonnie Hill.

When arrested she told officers she was "Marion King," had worked for newspapers in New York, Detroit and Chicago and had succumbed to the use of narcotics when "down and out" in New Orleans. A check failed to show any record of her having worked for newspapers in either of the cities.

She was known to Pierce, with whom she shared a Royal street apartment, as "Marion King," but it developed he knew it was not her real name.

Constant questioning brought the admission that she was "born Bonnie Hill" in Johnson county, near Yale, Ark. She also told officers her father was dead, and that her family moved from Arkansas to Houston, Texas.

It was learned that a girl listed as "Bonnie Hill, 13," was committed to the Galveston (Tex.) Training School from Harris county, Texas, in June, 1928, as an incorrigible and delinquent. The records show that the girl was released two years later to the custody of her mother, who was recorded as "Mrs. Louise Hill of Detroit."

It was revealed by a check of her fingerprints that she had been arrested three times by Detroit police under aliases. Names under which she was known in Detroit were "Geraldine Harris," "Geraldine Rutherford," and "Geraldine Harrison."

As the girl aided her lawyer in preparing a defense, police continued seeking to establish her family connections.

In Johnson County CLARKSVILLE, Ark.—Although it was impossible to establish the identification positively, it was learned here Monday that a man named W. O. Hill, who formerly lived at Yale, in the northern part of Johnson county, had a daughter named Bonnie.

About 12 years ago, the family moved from their farm home to Oklahoma, where the father died. The girl, Bonnie, was 11 years old when the family left Johnson county.

It was reported that Mrs. Hill now lives at Center Point, 14 miles west of Clarksville.

There were five other members of the family of W. O. Hill. There were three sons, Raymond, a minister, who now is attending a theological school in Chicago; and Fred and Gerald of Dewey, Okla. There were two other daughters, one of whom lives near Fort Smith and another who is living with her mother. Persons who knew the family of W. O. Hill while they lived at Yale said that they were well-to-do and highly respected. They were unable to vouch for the fact that the young woman held at New Orleans is the same Bonnie Hill who lived in Johnson county.

Association and the American Veterans Association.

The American Veterans Association branded the "scum of all veteranism" and said its membership was composed of professional patriots who rushed to buy Liberty bonds at the outbreak of war to collect interest in the years following, while the "real" American veterans rushed to France in defense of his homeland.

After reviewing compensation legislation since the close of the World war, Mr. Van Zandt emphasized two reasons why the Veterans of Foreign Wars demands immediate cash payment.

First, it is to save the balance of certificates not held by veterans who took advantage of an amendment to the Adjusted Compensation Service Act in 1931 to borrow up to 50 per cent of the total of their certificates, and are now required to pay 3 1/2 per cent interest which by 1945 in the majority of the cases will have literally "eaten up the balance because 92 per cent are unable to pay the interest," he said.

In the second place the payment of the certificates would put $2,000,000,000 in new currency into immediate circulation which to our thinking is nothing but carrying out exactly what President Roosevelt is attempting to do by increasing purchasing power of the unemployed through the National Recovery Act. This debt can be paid without increasing the budget, without increasing taxation and without upsetting the administration's efforts to bring sound prosperity, despite the howl that goes up in Washington that payment of the bonus would disrupt the government.

Gen. Hugh Johnson warns the U. S. against any policy which would have the "slightest chance of involving us in a war in the Orient." So don't complain if your shirts come back buttonless from the laundry.

Maybe not for a century, but some day, someone will successfully high jump 7 feet 2 inches, a California athlete prophesies. Wish we'd have measured ours the other day, when that auto hunked behind us.

President's Son Lobbyist, Charge

But Congressmen Resent Insinuation Against U. S. First Family

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A charge that Elliott Roosevelt, the president's son, was a "lobbyist" for aviation concerns was made Monday in the house during heated debate which preceded passage of the Mead air mail bill.

The measure, which would permit increases in air mail pay at the discretion of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was sent to the senate on a voice vote. The chorus of "ayes" was so loud that a count was considered unnecessary.

Objecting to the measure, Representative Mnas, Republican, Minnesota, said the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce was "behind the bill" and that he understood that young Roosevelt was "contact man" in Washington for the organization.

At headquarters of the chamber, Elliott Roosevelt was described as a consultant for the organization. He has been interested in aviation for several years.

Mnas, himself a former aviator, was not the only member who mentioned young Roosevelt. Representative Culkin, Republican, New York, said the president's son was "a new figure in the set-up."

"I am wondering," he remarked, "if his personality and his family connections have any relation to the potential attitude of Postmaster General Furley and the committee on the other side."

"It is to be regretted," said Representative Dockweiler, Democrat, California, "that the name of the son of the distinguished president is dragged in. Should sons of a president go off and bury themselves in a desert?"

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
Thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

The fell clutch of circumstance
Has not wined nor cried aloud
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears
Looms but the horror of the shade,
And yet the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

Scatterers not how straight the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul.

army and navy for Germany in order to defend Europe from Communism.

Regarding Memel.
The British foreign minister unexpectedly asked the question: "Are you expecting to take Memel?"

Memel is the mandated territory in Lithuania which was placed under the League of Nations' control after the World war. In answer, Hitler frankly stated Germany's readiness to enter into a treaty with Lithuania.

Another question in which Great Britain is not primarily interested was discussed, that of the proposed Danubian pact, Hitler insisting that no third powers must interfere if two German speaking nations on both sides of the boundary line wish to compose their differences.

Hitler was said to have insisted upon a Germany navy capable of controlling the Baltic sea, with a good-sized fleet as well, talking as if his regenerated army was an accomplished fact, not to be changed by the present negotiations.

The proposed pact for Eastern European security, a cardinal point in the recent Anglo-French accord to which it was hoped Germany will subscribe, was said to have been discussed.

The meeting was held behind closed doors.

Crop Loans to Be Made Next Week

Range From $10 to $500
—Must Use Available Private Loans

LITTLE ROCK — Emergency crop loans to Arkansas farmers will be available early next week, A. W. Walker, state supervisor for the Emergency Crop and Seed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration, announced Monday.

Applications for loans may be filed at offices of the Emergency Crop and Seed Loan Sections in each county starting next Monday or Tuesday, Mr. Walker said. Persons applying for loans of $50 or more, who have other sources of credit, will not be eligible for federal crop loans, he said. The maximum loan offered by the government this year will be $500, double the maximum allowed last year. The minimum loan will be $10. All loans carry 5 per cent interest unpaid back at the end of the crop year next fall.

Applicants seeking loans not in excess of $100 may obtain the money immediately after the application has been approved by the field supervisor for the Crop and Seed Loan Section and has been forwarded to the regional office at Memphis, Mr. Walker said. Arkansas will share in the $50,000,000 appropriation for such loans, but the fund is not prorated. Last year the government appropriated $40,000,000 for these loans.

Fertilizer Tests

potatoes tested at the station, the visitors were told that Irish Cobbler was the highest yielding variety, with Triumph strains next. For commercial purposes, Nancy Hall and Paragon sweet potatoes are recommended.

Mr. Ware pointed out that 10 Special, Hale's Best, Superfacto, and Pollock 10-25 are the leading cantaloupe varieties, and the Watson is the outstanding watermelon variety.

Of the 80 varieties of peaches tested at the station, Early Rose, Fair Beauty, Belle of Georgia, Mamie Ross, Elberta, and J. H. Hale, listed in the order of maturity have been the highest yielders, while the most promising apple varieties are Early Harvest, Early Red Bird, and Golden Delicious. One to three pounds of a nitrogen fertilizer analyzing 15 per cent or the equivalent is recommended for bearing trees, with application made at blooming time.

Desirable results with grape varieties cover a 6-year period have been obtained from Early Daisy, Herbert, Niagara, Campbell's Early, Delamare, Augustina, August Giant, Ellen, Scott, Muench, and Last Rose, listed in order of their maturity. Concord is a good producer, but ripens unevenly in this section.

The Klondyke, Aroma, and Blakemore are outstanding strawberry varieties, with the Southland showing promise. For old beds, 400 pounds of 5-10-5 fertilizer broadcast and worked into the soil as soon as fruit is harvested, and then an additional 200 pounds broadcast either the last of August or in the spring as growth starts, is recommended.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MILICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRINGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. In panic she rushes away and resumes name.

JARVIS HAPP, distinguished-looking stranger, recognizes Millicent and offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty parlor where she is transformed into a brunette. Happ takes her home, introduces her to his secretary, Ella, and to his stepbrother, ROBERT OAKS, and tells her a mysterious power over his stepmother.

Suddenly there is a knock on the door of Millicent's room.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI

NORMAN HAPP jumped back and stared at Millicent Graves apprehensively. Millicent moved toward the door as though to open it.

Norman caught her arm with his right hand, at the same time pressing the forefinger of his left hand against his lips to indicate the necessity for silence. He leaned closer to her and whispered, "Don't open that door while I'm here."

She would have said something, but he darted away from her on swiftly silent feet. He opened the door of her closet, stepped inside and pulled the door shut after him.

Knuckles sounded on the panels of the door.

Millicent Graves started once more toward the door to open it, then indignation got the better of her. She raised her voice so that it was perfectly audible to the person outside of the door and said, "I don't think I care to receive any more visitors tonight. Norman Happ is here and is just leaving."

At the sound of her words Happ emerged from the closet. His face was a dull red.

"What did you do that for?" he asked in a mumbling, surly voice. "Because," she told him, "I've done nothing to be ashamed of and I don't intend to be put in an embarrassing position."

She turned the knob and opened the door.

Jarvis Happ stood on the threshold. Gravely he surveyed the pair.

"May I ask," he inquired, "how long Norman has been here?"

Millicent Graves faced him defiantly.

"You may," she said, "ask Norman. He is the one to tell you. And now, I'll wish you both good night."

Jarvis Happ's eyes stared at her with that peculiar searching gaze which was so characteristic of the man.

"I think I told you," he said, "that you were to adopt a hands-off policy."

SHE said, defiantly, "I am telling you that if the men in this house don't quit invading my room I'm going to get a watchdog. All that I ask of you or of your son is a reasonable amount of privacy. Your son came to this room uninvited. I think perhaps his intentions were friendly. However, the fact remains that he came here uninvited."

Norman Happ said, "That's right, Dad. You can't blame her for feeling peeved. I walked in on her."

"Why?" asked the older man. "Because I wanted to warn her."

"About what, may I ask?"

"About Bob."

"What about Bob?"

"Bob has been trying thing with her."

"What sort of things?"

"I don't know. She won't tell me. But I'm the one that came to her room. I came without knocking. She resented my intrusion. We were arguing when you knocked at the door. She was asking me to leave—in fact, in saying that I leave."

For a moment the stern, searching eyes of Jarvis Happ softened somewhat. He glanced at his son standing erect and dignified. Then he said slowly, "Well, if that's the case, Norman, you would present a much more dignified appearance if you wiped the lipstick from your mouth."

With that he turned and stalked gravely down the hall.

Norman Happ, his face the color of a boiled beet, wiped furiously at his mouth with a handkerchief. Millicent Graves, torn between a desire to cry and to laugh, slammed the door shut and very audibly turned the key in the lock. Then she walked to a large over-stuffed chair, dropped into it and started to laugh. The whole situation was too utterly absurd. Norman Happ, standing there with lipstick smeared on his mouth, explaining to his father the unwarranted nature of his intrusion and the cool reception which he had received.

ABRUPTLY Millicent remembered the things she had learned from Norman Happ and the laughter died from her lips.

There really was some reason back of everything Jarvis Happ had done. Jarvis Happ knew of the woman in the black ermine coat, the mysterious woman whom George Dringold had described on the night of his death. . . . and Jarvis Happ had instructed Harry Felding, the chauffeur, to shadow this mysterious woman in black. That would mean, then, that Jarvis Happ didn't know the identity of the woman. Or, if he knew her identity, didn't know where she lived. It also meant that he was interested in finding out more about this woman.

Millicent Graves determined that she was going to cultivate Harry Felding. If he discovered anything concerning this woman who wore a black ermine fur coat and who seemed to exert such a powerful influence upon the lives of those with whom she came in contact, Millicent Graves decided that she would be in a position to find out just what information he had uncovered.

Slowly she started disrobing and as she slipped off her outer garments and stood before her mirror applying creams to her face, she ran over the events of the day in her mind.

Suddenly she realized that the interruptions had prevented her from looking over the books which Mr. Gentry had given her in the suitcase. Her eyes turned toward the suitcase. It was brown, with brass mountings. There were two straps which entirely surrounded the suitcase, and she noticed casually that one of the corners had been badly dented so that the edge of the brass reinforcement presented a jagged appearance.

She frowned as she thought how easy it would be to snag a stocking on that bit of brass, and determined she would have it fixed. Why not ask the chauffeur to fix it? That would be a good way to lay the foundation for her campaign.

SHE left the stool in front of her dressing table, took a few steps toward the suitcase, then realized she was too tired to bother with books. It had been a hard day. But she did want to take a look at those books before she retired, just to see what they looked like and how they had been kept.

She dropped into the overstuffed chair, placed her fingertips at the back of her neck and gently kneaded the taut muscles holding her neck as completely relaxed as she could, swiveling her head from side to side.

A delicious sense of languor crept over her. She slowly lowered her hands to her lap. The room was warm and cozy. She yawned, lay her head back and closed her eyes.

Millicent awoke abruptly, realizing that she had been asleep. She did not know how long she had slept, but she realized that some noise had awakened her.

She sat perfectly still, her senses alert, waiting, wondering if the noise would be repeated. A moment later she heard it again, the sound of rustling motion in the corridor just outside her door.

She remembered locking the door, wondered if someone had tried once more to enter her room without knocking.

Whoever it was who had paused outside the door had now started down the corridor. She could hear the sound of retreating steps. Then a door banged somewhere at the end of the corridor.

Millicent got to her feet, frowning. Who could have walked down the corridor to her door? And who would have paused to listen, or . . .

Her eyes lit on a slip of paper which protruded from beneath the door.

Evidently, then, someone had called to leave a note.

She got to her feet and realized from the cramped condition of her limbs that she must have been sleeping for some time. Sheer exhaustion had taken its toll.

She slid the paper from beneath the door.

It was a paper upon which appeared a typewritten, unsigned message. The message was brief and sinister:

"THE WOMAN IN THE BLACK ERMINE COAT IS HERE."

Graveling Begins on Highway No. 19

First 5 Miles From Prescott to Waldo to Be Resurfaced

PRESCOTT, Ark.—Actual work was to be started Tuesday on the resurfacing with gravel of the first five miles of the Prescott-to-Rosston road, beginning at the city limits of Prescott.

R. E. LeDaughter of Boughton and J. C. Neal of Hermitage will do the work on this first five mile stretch.

E. O. Jenkins of the state Highway Department will be the state engineer on this job. He stated that it would take about 10 working days to complete the job. Gravel will be hauled from the gravel pit on Highway 67 about five miles north of Prescott.

Although no contracts have been let to date, it is expected that as soon as the first five-mile stretch is completed work will be started on an additional five miles and after this has been completed additional contracts will be let until the entire road from Prescott to Rosston has been resurfaced.

This project of getting the Rosston road regaveled has been sponsored by the local Young Business Men's Association and members of the organization, in co-operation with some of the influential townspeople have been working constantly for the past few months on the various high officials in an effort to get this work done.
